

Acknowledgments

I am very much indebted to the Max Planck Institute for Demographic Research, Rostock. This doctoral project has been conducted within the Laboratory of Contemporary European Fertility and Family Dynamics, under the great supervision of Prof. Jan M. Hoem. I appreciate the constructive and friendly working environment in this Division, the assistance I received from the members of the Research Support as well as the comprehensive training at the International Max Planck Research School for Demography. In particular, I thank Dr. Hill Kulu for excellent mentoring.

I am also grateful to my colleagues at the Institut national d'études démographiques, Paris, who ensured that I could finish the work on my thesis although I had already been employed there.

Moreover, I thank Miriam Hils-Cosgrove for valuable language editing of the book.

Being a doctoral student has been a great and learning-intensive phase in my life, though certainly not one of the easiest. I am thankful to many persons who offered advice and encouragement in times of difficulties and shared the happy moments with me.
