BRIEF INSTRUCTIONS FOR INTERVIEWERS

Moscow

2005

Target group of the survey

- those who participated in the survey “Parents and Children, Men and Women in the Family and the Society”, which was conducted in the summer of 2004 in various towns and villages around Russia. The survey will cover men and women between the ages of 18 and 55 inclusive.

You should interview only those people whose name and patronymic appear in the address list. More specifically:

The “Address” columns in the address lists for this survey contain, in addition to the address itself (street name, house, flat), the name and patronymic of the respondent. For us it is important that, for a particular number, you interview exactly the person named in the address column. No one else will do.

- If this person has moved house, but it is possible for you to interview them at their new address, then do so. In such cases, the person’s number will stay the same. Cross out the old address (leaving the name and patronymic as they are), and very carefully replace it with the address at which the person now lives.
- If the person has not moved house, but it turns out that the address for this person appears incorrectly in the address lists, then the same number must be kept for this person. Be sure to correct the address.

General concept: each number corresponds to a particular individual, i.e. to the name and patronymic given in the “Address” column.

A more complex (but perfectly realistic) situation:

- some of the addresses in the address lists have been mixed around.
For example, the lists might show:

Number 105: Ulitsa Stroitelei 3/12, Marina Petrovna, born 1973; number 108: Ulitsa Stroitelei, 3/56, Andrei Nikolaevich, born 1960 – whereas in fact Marina Petrovna lives in apartment 56 and Andrei Nikolaevich in apartment 12.

Here, the number will again correspond to the individual. Marina Petrovna will still be assigned number 105, while Andrei Nikolaevich will continue to be listed under number 108. The apartment numbers will need to be corrected.

Overall structure of the questionnaire

The purpose of the survey is to collect data on: the occupational biographies of adults in the Russian Federation.

The questionnaire contains various blocks of questions applicable to respondents who are of working age, retired, unemployed, etc.

The survey will look at the occupational biography of each respondent, starting from January in the year of his or her seventeenth birthday.

The questionnaire covers 4 key aspects of respondents' biographies:

- children born
- migration
- main occupation
- additional occupation (performed in parallel to main occupation).

Information on the first two aspects is collected mainly because they can easily be linked to specific points in time, which helps respondents to remember the dates relevant to their main and additional occupations.

Ultimately, however, this information will be presented only very schematically.

The history of the respondent's main occupation will include information on his or her education, gainful employment, and various non-work activities (parental leave, retirement). This information is collected up to and including the present – in other words, up until the time of the interview.

Which questions are asked with regard to parallel (additional) occupations depends on the type of main activity in which the respondent was involved during the respective time period. It is particularly important that only the following combinations of main and parallel activities be taken into account:

- education + parallel employment/parental leave,
- gainful employment + education/parallel gainful employment/parental leave,
- housework + education/parallel gainful employment/parental leave,
- unemployment + education/gainful employment.

Structure of the table

During the survey, the interviewer is required to use a structured questionnaire, asking questions orally and presenting the interviewee with cards to allow him or her to select from a number of possible answers. All of the information obtained from an individual respondent must be recorded in a personal copy of the attached form (table).

Two different colours of pen are required for filling in the table: red and blue.

All notes relating to the respondent's main occupation are to be made in red, while those regarding a parallel (additional) activity should be entered in blue.

The interviewer may use only Arabic numerals – 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 – for recording the respondent's answers in the table.

Each numbered line in column 1 of the table stands for a specific year. The grey and white lines within a year represent its four quarters.

The numbers in the first column indicate the year.

The second column shows the numbers of the quarters for each year.

The third column of the table is used for recording the months on which the respondent's children were born. Over the course of the interview, the interviewer must discover the month and year on which children were born, and record the number of the month in the line corresponding to the respective year. If the child was born between the months of January and March, the number of the month should be written in the first line for the year, i.e. the line corresponding to the first quarter. If the child was born between April and June, the number of the month must be written in the second line for the year (which represents the second quarter), and so on.

If the respondent cannot remember the exact month of a particular event, then the interviewer should attempt to determine the quarter of the year in which it occurred. The codes used for recording events of this kind appear in columns 4, 9, 14, 22 and 31 of the table header: for the first quarter of the year, the code 21 is used, for the second: 22, for the third: 23, and for the fourth: 24. If the respondent cannot remember even in which quarter a particular episode occurred, but can remember that it either started or finished at, for example, the beginning of the year or in the spring or autumn, then the appropriate half-year code should be used: 31 to denote that the event in question took place between January and June, or code 32 to represent the period from June to December. The code 31 should be entered in the first quarter of the year, while the code 32 should be recorded in the fourth quarter of the year.

Columns 4-8 are used to record information regarding the geographical movements of the respondent during the period of time in question.

Columns 9-21 are used for recording details of the respondent's main activity in the various years of his or her life.

Columns 22-30 are for any information relating to additional employment, i.e. work carried out by the respondent in parallel to his or her main occupation.

In cases where the respondent was involved in non-work activities such as parental leave, his or her occupation at those times should be entered in columns 31 and 32.

Rules for completion of the table

The record of episodes in the life of a respondent begins on the line corresponding to the year of the individual's seventeenth birthday.

Each year features a line beginning with a horizontal arrow, which should be used at the beginning - and only the beginning - of the interview. You should begin filling in the table from this line, in the year which is circled. You should not write anything else above this point. Once this line has been filled in, these lines should be left empty for the remaining years.

Each quarter contains two lines for recording information: one for the end of an occupation (the first line: “ended:”) and one for the beginning of a new one (the second line: “started:”).

When recording dates, you should enter the number of the month or the code for the quarter after the colon, inserting an arrow to the left of the recorded figures, running from the word “started:” down to the word “ended:”

Two dates are required to define the duration of a particular episode in the biography of the respondent: the beginning and the end of the activity. These should be joined by an arrow running from one to the other. The last episode in the biography of the respondent – the end of which will fall in April 2005 – is no exception to this rule. Therefore at least one arrow must end in the line corresponding to the date on which the survey is conducted, in order to denote the completion of the survey.

The last information to be recorded is that relating to the date (month and year) on which the survey is conducted. In other words, if the respondent is involved in a certain activity which continues right up until the present time, then this activity should be noted down in the line marked “present time”. This includes details relating to his or her job title, working hours and work schedule.

If no questions are asked regarding the end of a particular activity, then the box in the table corresponding to the end of that activity should be marked at the right-hand end with a double bar, and the boxes beyond that filled in with crosses.

The edges of sections are denoted by double vertical bars.

Information elaborating on a particular event must be written in the margin alongside the place where the event itself is recorded.

Red and blue lines

When filling in the table, you should use a red line to indicate the respondent's main activity. This line will appear in several different columns in the table, as the main activity may be study, work, or some other occupation. This red line may be interrupted, i.e. there may be periods of time in which there is no main activity specified for the respondent (this may occur if, for example, the respondent spent time in prison and is unwilling to speak about this). For periods where the respondent was involved in several activities at the same time, you should always ask him or her to name one of these as a main activity.

It may be that two or more main activities overlap each other from the point of view of time. In such cases it is essential to check with the respondent that he or she has not named the wrong dates. If the dates are correct, then it is important to ascertain which activity was the main one for the respondent during that time period. Perhaps the respondent worked at the same time as studying. Check with the respondent: 1) which occupation he or she considers to be the main one for that time period, and 2) at what time the additional occupation became a main one.

Commentary on individual questions

When carrying out the survey it is important to remember that the form is not suitable for verbal notes. You should always encourage the respondent to select an answer from the relevant card, and to tell you the code corresponding to that answer.

Question 4.

There is no need to record the name of the town or village.

The main cities of regions, districts and territories, and the capitals of republics, should be written down as the name of the respective region, district, territory or republic. For example, instead of “Smolensk”, you should write “Smolensk Region”. Instead of “Kazan”, you should write down “Tatarstan” to indicate the place of residence of the respondent now, or “Tatar SSR”, if you wish to denote the place of residence of the respondent during the Soviet era.

Moscow and Saint Petersburg are exceptions to this rule, as they are regions in their own right, so the name of the city itself should be recorded.

The administrative entity to which a town or village belongs should be written down as it was at the time of the event in question.

Question 5.

A military post located on the territory of a non-rural settlement should be assigned code 1, 2 or 3, whereas for a military post located on the territory of a rural settlement, code 4 should be used. The same system should be used for military bases, prisons, etc.

Question 6.

Where the respondent moved out to the dacha (holiday cottage) for leisure purposes, this should not be viewed as a change of place of residence.

Question 14.

If the respondent studied in two faculties at the same time, you should record the course of study which he or she considers to be the main one.

Question 15.

Bear in mind that this is with regard to study as a main activity.

Question 25.

A “self-employed” person is one who works for him- or herself, rather than having been hired as a waged or salaried employee.

A “family business” is one which belongs either to the respondent or to one of his or her relatives, but not to the family of a neighbour or other non-related person.

What to check before submitting your work to a supervisor:

- 1) that the interview begins on the year circled, starting with the very top line for that year – the line marked with an arrow. This line must be completed in every questionnaire: it must provide details of migration for each respondent; it must also contain information relating either to education, or to occupation (a main job, an additional job, or another occupation) for each individual respondent.
- 2) that the arrows drawn by the interviewer really are positioned to the LEFT of the numbers. It is essential that they start in the box in which the start date (month) is recorded, and that they touch the word “started:” (if you wish you can place a heavy dot here to mark the beginning of the arrow). It is also essential that the arrow ends in the box in which the end date (month) appears, in such a way that the arrow rests against the word “ended:”
- 3) that the last line for 2005 contains entries in red to indicate the respondent’s main occupation at the present time. In other words, the red arrow representing the respondent’s main activity must end in the last line for 2005. If the respondent’s main activity at the present time is a job in which he or she has been involved for 12 months or more, then columns 15-18 of the “present time” line should be filled with crosses (like in the “ended:” lines), while columns 19, 20 and 21 should be completed.

- 4) if the individual has worked for exactly three months in a quarter, that the beginning of the activity is indicated in the “started:” box, and the month on which it ends is recorded in the margin. There is no need to draw an arrow between the two dates.
- 5) if, in the table, the respondent’s main activity – study or work – is indicated by a red line, and a blue line has been drawn parallel to this with the annotation “PL” (parental leave), that you have verified and written in the margin whether the woman stopped working or studying while she was pregnant with, giving birth to, and caring for her children. Was she only registered as working or studying, or did she actually work?
- 6) that the final entry in columns 5-6 corresponds to the respondent’s current place of residence.
